The labels we place on others and those placed on us based on race, gender, sexual orientation, and physical appearance limit the quality of interaction between us and our ability to break down the barrier of stereotypes.

That is oppression.

In the tunnel, you will experience dramatizations of these oppressive interactions and, afterwards, participate in discussions on how to deal with them. The Tunnel of Oppression is performed at universities across the country to help unite diverse campus communities. Multicultural Student Affairs and our campus partners are proud to present it to the NC State campus community.
